

■ Contributors

'Gbenga Aina is a deaf Nigerian lawyer and director of the Office of Diversity and Equity for Students at Gallaudet University with oversight of the Keeping the Promise black and Latino student retention program, LGBTQA Resource Center, and multicultural student programs.

Arlinda S. Boland is a deaf American woman and a graduate of Gallaudet University's master's program in international development. Her thesis focused on the accessibility of HIV/AIDS services to deaf people in the Kwa-Zulu Natal region, South Africa. She is currently working as a development officer in Cambodia.

Jan-Kåre Breivik is professor of community work at Bergen University College. He is a hearing Norwegian anthropologist writing about minority issues such as deafness, homelessness, disability, ethnicity, and gender.

Meredith Burke is a DeafDisabled woman from the United States who received her master's degree in deaf studies with a concentration in cultural studies from Gallaudet University. She currently teaches disability studies as a contract instructor at Gallaudet University.

Noppawan Chainarong is a deaf woman from Bangkok, Thailand, who received her master's degree in deaf studies with a concentration in cultural studies from Gallaudet University. She currently works at the English Language Institute, Office of the Basic Education Commission, Ministry of Education, Thailand.

Vee Yee Chong is a deaf Chinese man from Malaysia who received his master's degree in deaf studies with a concentration in cultural studies from Gallaudet University. As a PhD student in social science at the University of Malaya, Kuala Lumpur, his current research focuses on deaf identity and culture.

Audrey C. Cooper is a lecturer in the Department of Anthropology at American University, Washington, DC. She is a hearing anthropologist from the United States whose research focuses on deaf education and deaf social change movements in Việt Nam.

Onno Crasborn is an associate professor of linguistics at Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. He is a hearing Dutch linguist who has been working on the linguistics of the Sign Language of the Netherlands since 1995.

Jess Cuculick is an assistant professor in the Liberal Studies Department at Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, New York. She is a deaf American who teaches sociology. Her research focuses on social media, deaf education, and public health.

Maartje De Meulder is a Belgian deaf PhD researcher at the University of Jyväskylä in Finland. Her current research mainly focuses on the development of sign language recognition legislation in Finland and Scotland.

Steven D. Emery is a deaf political activist who has undertaken several work roles with the UK Deaf community, including development work, counseling, advice work and academic research. His PhD thesis was on citizenship and the deaf community and he has also undertaken research around genetics and group rights.

Michele Friedner is an assistant professor of health and rehabilitation sciences at Stony Brook University. She is a deaf American medical anthropologist who studies deaf peoples' social, moral, political, and economic practices in urban India.

E. Mara Green is a postdoctoral researcher at the University of California San Diego. She is a hearing American linguistic anthropologist who has conducted long-term research in Nepal with deaf signers.

Mike Gulliver is currently a research associate in religion and Deaf history at the University of Bristol. He is a hearing British historian and geographer whose historical research focuses on "Deaf space" in France and the United Kingdom.

Hilde Hauland is a Norwegian deaf social anthropologist who focuses on disability and Deaf social and cultural themes. She is currently a postdoctoral researcher at the Faculty of Teacher and Interpreter Education at Sør-Trøndelag University College.

Anja Hiddinga is an assistant professor at the Department of Social and Behavioral Sciences at the University of Amsterdam in the Netherlands. She is a hearing social scientist interested in the sociology and anthropology of health, disease, normality, and disability.

Deniz İlkbařaran is a hearing Turkish scholar who studies the cultural heritage and communicative practices of deaf people in Turkey and designs multilingual interactive learning environments for deaf people.

Christopher A. N. Kurz is a Deaf associate professor at Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, New York. His current research focuses on deaf studies, mathematics and science education, and technology in education.

Annelies Kusters is a postdoctoral researcher at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic Diversity in Göttingen, Germany. She is a Belgian deaf ethnographer whose interests are deaf studies, anthropology, human geography, and sociolinguistics. She has conducted research in Surinam, Ghana, and India.

Paddy Ladd is a former reader at the (now defunct) Centre for Deaf Studies, Bristol, England. He coined the "Deafhood" concept and in his current writing he focuses on Deafhood pedagogies.

Elizabeth M. Lockwood is CBM's representative at the United Nations. She is a hearing American ethnographer who is interested in deaf peoples' social and political movements.

Philippa Merricks, a British deaf woman, currently works for Deafway, a UK-based deaf organization with projects in the United Kingdom, Nepal, Uganda, and the Philippines, and has worked in various international deaf events and organizations including the European Union of the Deaf Youth.

Rezenet Tsegay Moges is an archaeological graphics director at SRS Inc. She is a Deaf Eritrean-American linguistic anthropologist who focused on Eritrean Sign Language for her master's degree in anthropology.

Erin Moriarty Harrelson is a deaf researcher from the United States and a PhD candidate in the Department of Anthropology at American University. She recently returned from fieldwork in Cambodia where she was the 2014–2015 Fulbright-National Geographic Digital Storytelling Fellow. Her research interests include Deaf subjectivities, tourism, international development projects, and NGOs.

Khadijat Rashid is a professor in the business and international development programs at Gallaudet University. She is a deaf American of Nigerian origin who has worked with development projects for the deaf communities in South Africa, Nigeria, Ghana, and Thailand.

Elena Ruiz-Williams is a multiracial/multiethnic Xicanx Deaf teacher, writer, and activist in the United States. She received a master's degree in Deaf cultural studies from Gallaudet University.

Pierre Schmitt is a PhD candidate in social anthropology and ethnology at the School for Advanced Studies in Social Sciences (EHESS) in Paris. He is a hearing French anthropologist whose work focuses on sign language artistic practices and networks at local and international levels.

Per Koren Solvang is a Norwegian hearing sociologist and disability studies scholar. He is currently professor of rehabilitation at Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences.

Michael Steven Stein is a deaf American attorney and partner with the firm Stein & Vargas, LLP, a law firm that advocates for the rights of people with disabilities. He is also executive director of Deaf We Can, a 501(c)(3) organization that helps deaf people advocate for their own legal rights.

Outi Toura-Jensen, a deaf Finnish woman with a master's degree in education, teaches in the Denmark-based Frontrunners program, an international deaf education program.

Kirk VanGilder is an assistant professor of religion at Gallaudet University. He is a Deaf American theologian whose research draws upon experiences in short-term missions with Deaf people in Zimbabwe, Kenya, and Turkey.

Filip Verhelst, a deaf Belgian man, teaches in the Denmark-based Frontrunners program, an international education program.

Ole Vestergaard, a deaf Danish man, teaches in the Denmark-based Frontrunners program.

Amy T. Wilson is a professor in the Department of Education at Gallaudet University. She developed Gallaudet's master's degree program in international development and is its program director. She is a hearing American researcher studying how to improve development assistance to Deaf communities in economically poor countries. As of November 1st, 2015, she will be leaving Gallaudet to become the director of international programs for deaf projects in economically poor countries with the Mill Neck Foundation.

Rowena E. Winiarczyk, a Canadian deaf woman, is a graduate of Gallaudet University's master's program in international development. She coordinates the research and global projects at Gallaudet University's Office of Research Support and International Affairs and has international development experience in Panama, Slovakia, Chile, Argentina, Malaysia, and Việt Nam.

Mark Zaurov is a Russian-born Israeli German Deaf Jew. Currently, he is a PhD candidate at the University of Hamburg. His scope of research includes the Deaf Holocaust and Deaf Jews in the arts, sciences, and politics.